This revision corrects an administrative error in the solicitation regarding the deadline for submission of questions. 2. Questions and Answers Pursuant to paragraph (j)(3) of the solicitation, the Government provides the following response to a question of general applicability: Question 1: Is the solicitation associated with the previously issued Request for Information (RFI), or is it a separate opportunity? The solicitation appears to overlap with the RFI but contains some differences. Answer: The solicitation is the competitive procurement that follows the Government's earlier market research. The previously issued Request for Information (RFI) was conducted solely for market research purposes and did not constitute a solicitation. Information obtained through the RFI informed the Government's acquisition planning. The solicitation posted on SAM.gov is the controlling procurement document, and interested quoters should prepare and submit quotations based on the requirements of the solicitation, including any amendments thereto. The Government considered information received in response to the RFI during its acquisition planning; however, the solicitation establishes the Government's final requirements for this procurement.
